Blakes is the most important and unique addition to the all-too-short list of really good London hotels. Situated in a quiet residential street joining Old Brompton and Fulham Roads, Blakes is central to West London and Aer Lingus Air Terminals, Gloucester Road and South Kensington Underground stations, Kings Road, Museums and Harrods.

Setting a new standard of hospitality and comfort, Blakes combines an adventurous decorative spirit with all the best services to be expected from a first-class hotel anywhere. Behind the original Victorian architecture, Blakes' designers have created over thirty sparkling, happy rooms, each with own W.C., bath and shower, television and world-wide self-dialling telephone. There are two-room penthouse suites with private roof gardens and automatic passenger and service lifts to all floors.

Room, valet and secretarial services are available at all times. An elegant "Thirties" palm-studded restaurant and adjoining bar complete what is undoubtedly London's most exciting small hotel.
