

focus:
multiple arts '76
concrete poetry
music, graphic art, film

february 20-march 29

matrix gallery

Instituto de Arte Contemporânea

focus: multiple arts '76 matrix gallery february 20–march 29, 1976 room 002 school of education visual exhibit monday–friday 8-12 and 1-5

gallery exhibitors

iu poets
mary ellen solt
andrew adams
stephen brownlee
deborah campbell
anthony cussen
andrea eberbach
melissa farlow
nancy gilmer
john hupp
tom jaroll
scott jensen
bonnie maurer
katherine mehling
p. scott millsop
sheryl nelson
alan parker
laer pearce
richard pflum
michael j. phillips
frederick rodgers
jeanne rothgeb
edward saunders
ann schneider
carol simmons
ann tavormina
robert verboon
roseanne wasserman
julie westover
grace whyland
daniel winn

brazilians
décio pignatari
ronaldo azeredo
edgard braga
augusto de campos
haroldo de campos
luiz ángelo pinto
pedro xisto

graphic designers
neli ayoub
antonio barra
maria cecilia machado de barros oswaldo bisordi
roberto campadello
john dearstyne
algar dole
david farlow
hermelindo fiaminghi
fernando lemos
timothy mayer
a. doyle moore
sheryl nelson
décio pignatari
julio plaza
virginia quental
elza tsumori
thelma weisz

the second arts festival on indiana university's bloomington campus illustrates the mutual inspiration of the arts and the interpenetration of conventional art forms in our time. concrete poetry has exploited the visual as well as the aural possibilities of the individual word and even the single letter. constellations of words in space have replaced linear progression with a visual and spatial syntax. the poem is seen as icon or ideogram. it has transcended the printed page and appeared as poster or painting or sculpture. semiotic poems are the result of assigning verbal meanings to visual signs. subjecting their material to chance operations or processes of permutation, poets have experimented with techniques also encountered in the other arts. webern's "klangfarbenmelodie" was translated into multi-colored ideograms. certain readings of such texts, sometimes involving several voices, are creative pieces in their own right. such readings as well as musical settings or transpositions of concrete poems have in turn inspired choreographers to interpretations in the idiom of modern dance.

the international concrete poetry movement was launched twenty years ago by the brazilian "noigandres" group with an exhibition of concrete art and poetry in são paulo and rio de janeiro. décio pignatari, one of its initiators, is currently a visiting professor on the bloomington campus. one of the most prominent north american concrete poets, mary ellen solt, is an i.u. professor whose teaching and example have for years inspired students to creative work in poetry, design, musical composition, theatre, dance, and film-making, encouraged and supported by faculty members in the other disciplines. the "focus: multiple arts '76" festival unites the work of brazilian poets, designers and composers with concrete poems or works in other art forms based on concrete poems created by individuals formerly or at present associated with indiana university at bloomington.

claus clüver

friday, february 20, 1976 - opening reception 7-8:30 p.m. in matrix gallery performance 8:30 p.m. - room 009 school of education

riday, february 27, 1976
reception 7-8:30 p.m. in matrix gallery performance 8:30 p.m. - room 452 music annex special concert

multiple arts and music for the voice with the university singers
jan harrington, conductor

- | | |
|---|--|
| three airs for frank o'hara's angel (1972) | lukas foss
(born 1922) |
| maria bernazzani, soprano
steve sulich, harpsichord fred opie, percussion
women of the university singers | gene alex, speaker george broske, piano |
| musical settings of concrete poetry | |
| tres canções (1970) | willy corrêa de oliveira
(born 1938) |
| canção no. 1: flor dâ boca (augusto de campos) canção no. 2: um movimento (décio pignatari) canção no. 3: poesia em tempo (haroldo de campos) | |
| | david bray, bass
peter lauffer, piano |
| um movimento (décio pignatari) (1962) | willy corrêa de oliveira |
| melinda o'neal, conductor | |
| cicatrizeza (augusto de campos) (1970) | willy corrêa de oliveira |
| donna harler, soprano | |
| geranium, white rose, and marigolds
(mary ellen solt) (1975) | joseph pelphrey
(born 1947) |
| university singers
jan harrington, conductor | |

friday, march 5, 1976
reception 7-8:30 p.m. in matrix gallery
performance 8:30 p.m. - room 009 school of education

1. reading: "i see through the window" (1972) bonnie maurer

2. some poems in the exhibition mary ellen solt

3. film: "the white flower" (1975) margaret wolfson valerie mrak
judith martin
(based on mary ellen solt's poem "the white flower")

4. noigandres poems: some explications claus clüver

5. tape: "um movimento" (1962) willy corrêa de oliveira (choral setting of décio pignatari's poem "um movimento")

"vai-e-vem" (1969) gilberto mendes (composition based on a poem by josé lino grünwald)

instituto de arte contemporânea

acknowledgements

advisors: claus clüver, décio pignatari, mary ellen solt director: jessie lovano-kerr co-ordinators: mary jane neale, anne zelenke matrix exhibit: mary jane neale, anne zelenke publicity: cathy bogolia, hugh hazelrigg

"A" logo: tom coleman

flyer design: judy burnison poster design: carrie hendron lester program design: mary jane neale, anne zelenke sponsors: indiana university bloomington committee on the arts office of the vice-president, bloomington