

KRÖLLER-MÜLLER HOUSE 1912

instituto

The Kröller-Müller House
The Kröller-Müller House, designed by the architect H. van der Stroom, is a prime example of the Dutch architectural style of the early 20th century. It is a long, white, classical-style building with a central entrance and a large portico. The building is set in a landscape with trees and a body of water. The house is a prime example of the Dutch architectural style of the early 20th century.

arte contemporânea