BRICK COUNTRY HOUSE
LEWIS H. HOWES
1924

BRICK COUNTRY HOUSE, designed by Lewis H. Howes, is a prime example of the Prairie School style. It features a long, horizontal profile with a flat roof and a series of interconnected rectangular volumes. The exterior is clad in brick, and the interior is characterized by open-plan living spaces and large windows. The house is set on a large, flat lot, and the surrounding landscape is landscaped with low hedges and a wide driveway.
